Abraham is the common ancestor of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam – we call them the three Abrahamic religions.

The story of Abraham's life is recounted and interpreted in different ways in each of these three religions, and each religion carries interesting lessons for all of our religions. Although rooted in antiquity, many of these lessons have great relevance to our lives in contemporary times.

Come join us as we learn from different perspectives from each other about the person we regard as the founder of our three great religions.
