

Does it matter if public figures are rude and untruthful in interviews?

These days, politicians globally are becoming more and more offensive about their opponents. Some even tell lies. And it's not confined to politicians – all of us could improve our interactions with others.

Uncivil behaviour matters because it undermines democracy, incites people to violence, deepens divisions in society, and has other harmful effects.

You can help to resist this by coming along to hear insights from the three Abrahamic faiths – Christianity, Judaism and Islam – and perspectives from tangata whenua about how we conduct public discussions.

It promises to be a lively evening full of insights and good manners. Just what you'd expect of a civilised city like Wellington.

Attendance is free but registration is essential. We look forward to the pleasure of your company.
